Six Senses Hideaway Samui in Thailand named a 2010 Andrew Harper Grand Award Recipient

Winners revealed in the January issue of Andrew Harper's Hideaway Report

New York – January 1, 2010: Six Senses Hideaway Samui in Thailand has been named a 2010 Grand Award Winner by Andrew Harper in the January issue of Hideaway Report, it was announced today. Andrew Harper's Hideaway Report is a top resource for intelligence on luxury travel and is based on unbiased, firsthand research.

Grand Award winners represent the creme de la creme of the hotels and resorts that Andrew Harper has visited during the previous 12 months. To be considered, properties must be relatively small, possess distinctive characters and demonstrate an unwavering commitment to personal service and refined hospitality. Mr Harper does not evaluate hotels by means of a checklist, but uses his three decades of experience to identify those qualities that separate the good from the truly enchanting.
